Bill's Bytes

Do you still worry about moving your clock back (or forward) in fall (or spring)? Most of our phones have the ability to set the time for themselves, and since many of us use our phones as our alarm clocks, we may not think about setting our clocks as a necessity as we once did. Think about it—if we have our watch set up to our phone, it sets itself, too! There is just one problem with this: my trust in technology is pretty low. When it comes to those two days a year when we change the clocks, my night is filled with anxiety (it may not help that it is always on a Saturday). What if it doesn't work? What if my alarm goes off at the wrong time? What if, what if, what if? And so instead of enjoying that extra hour of sleep, what little I get is usually fitful, spending the night checking and rechecking the time. I even set my alarm an hour earlier than normal in case there is a glitch. Of course, it has been several years since I started using my phone as my alarm clock. Not once has there ever been a glitch when it comes to daylight saving time. But that doesn't matter, there could always be that one time.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations to Corrie Hague who was baptized Thursday, October 24th. Please welcome Corrie to our church family.

Many of us have trust issues. Technology has let us down. But people also let us down. Sometimes they attack us for no reason. Sometimes they do not do what they said they would. We have been beaten down, bullied, and betrayed. Sadly, we often project the emotions that come from a lack of trust onto God. What if He won't do as He promised? What if He doesn't love me? What if, what if, what if? Has God ever broken any of His promises? No, not one. God cannot lie (Numbers 23:19; Titus 1:2; Hebrews 6:18). It is acceptable that we distrust technology. It is sad, but also understandable if we do not trust some people. But God? Remember that faith from a Biblical perspective and trust are one and the same. So when we are told to have faith in God, we are also being told to put our trust in Him. How can we be saved if we do not trust the One who is doing the saving?

Look back at His faithfulness and know that we will experience His faithfulness through all eternity. There is no need to be anxious when it comes to God and the promises that He gives His people. May our faith in God increase!

-Bill
